Life of a Quarter – Chain of Custody

At WASH, we are just as diligent about protecting coins as we are about collecting them. Over the course of our seven decades as an industry leader, we have gone to extensive lengths to develop and establish a “chain of custody” that safeguards every coin from the time one is inserted into one of our washers or dryers until the time you deposit your commission check in the bank.

- Our route collectors each must pass a rigorous background check.
- On-site coins are placed in a locked bag, which is placed directly into a vault inside one of our vehicles.
- The vehicle’s secured vault cannot be opened while the vehicle is in the field, and each WASH vehicle is tracked via GPS satellite back to our secure facility.
- Once inside our secure processing center, WASH employees work in teams to ensure accuracy and provide checks and balances.
- Digital security cameras record the progression from start to finish beginning with the unloading of vehicle vaults and transferring money to the restricted-access counting room.
- Our employees record revenues from each individual account using the most accurate and reliable coin and currency counters available.
- WASH’s proprietary software (ARC) electronically scans receipts and records all coin & currency data.

Once every last coin and bill are accounted for, WASH entrusts our collections to Brink’s, since 1859 the most reliable name in secure transportation worldwide.
